'Regard Bleu #13'

Festival for ethnographic student film and media
Ethnographic Museum (Völkerkundemuseum) of the University of Zürich, Switzerland

October 19- 21, 2018

We are proud to announce this year's 13th edition of 'Regard Bleu', a festival for ethnographic student film and media organized by students in collaboration with the Ethnographic Museum of the University of Zürich. 'Regard Bleu' is dedicated to fresh and aspiring audio-visual projects by students from Universities as well as from Art and Film Schools and welcomes a broad variety of films and media. Over the last editions, the festival has grown to be an inspiring event promoting exchange across disciplines and genres on the current trends in these fields.

The call is not limited to any specific academic discourse or thematic restrictions. We invite students of visual anthropology, ethnographic or documentary film to submit their works covering aspects of contemporary culture and society from any geographical region. The Regard Bleu offers a platform for the discussion of student works with other students, open minded professionals and the interested public. Therefore we particularly encourage young filmmakers and ethnographic researchers to submit their debut feature.

We invite student producers of film and other audio-visual media from all over the world to submit their projects

- using the submission form on the website and sending it with the required documents and the film by post to
Völkerkundemuseum der Universität Zürich
'Regard Bleu #13'
Pelikanstrasse 40

- or by filling in the online form and uploading the film

Projects will be accepted in any language, however, we kindly ask contributors to provide subtitles in English. Films shall not be older than 5 years.
